Ocean City, MD -- Believe In Tomorrow Children's Foundation will host Maryland Governor Larry Hogan on Friday morning as he tours The Children's House by the Sea. The Governor will spend time with the critically ill children and their families. As a cancer survivor himself, the Governor will have the chance to reconnect with his fellow treatment buddy, who is staying at The House along with her family this week. The Believe In Tomorrow Children's House by the Sea has been recognized as the first pediatric respite facility for critically ill children in the United States.

Believe In Tomorrow Founder and CEO, Brian Morrison was quoted: "We are very excited to host Governor Hogan at our House By the Sea. This facility and our other two locations in Ocean City, along with our other properties in Deep Creek Lake, Delaware and North Carolina serve pediatric oncology patients and their families from throughout the United States. I'm sure our guests will be excited to meet the Governor. Moments like these provide lifelong memories, and we are grateful that Governor Hogan will be joining us."

Believe In Tomorrow continues to expand our pediatric respite programs. We currently have two additional Maryland properties under construction in Ocean City and Deep Creek Lake.

Believe In Tomorrow receives an extraordinary level of support from local businesses and residents. Due to their generosity, families in Believe In Tomorrow respite programs enjoy a wide array of donated local activities such as surf lessons, amusement park access, fishing and boating trips, as well as delicious meals from restaurants. All of these activities are free of charge to the families.
